Operated under the auspices of the Sheriff's Youth Foundation, and funded by grants and charitable donations, the programs espouse multi-culturalism without economic boundaries. Each child receives lessons on self-esteem, peer pressure, empowerment, social values, and other areas of self-enrichment.

Recently refurbished, the Audrey and Sydney Irmis Youth Activity Center houses the South Los Angeles Sheriff's Station Youth Activity League, a venue that offers to local children organized sports activities, tutoring, and an opportunity to interact with responsible adults in a safe and secure environment. The Sheriff's Department currently operates ten Youth Activity Leagues throughout the County.

Established in 1971, the leagues provide thousands of youngsters with organized activities such as boxing, aerobics, karate, weight training, tutoring, scouting, and summer employment. All of the programs are tied to education. To participate, each child must strive to maintain a "C" average minimum or be involved in the league's tutoring program.
